Chris practices in the areas of administrative and regulatory law, with a focus on municipal and planning advice, environmental approvals, and expropriations. As a trusted advisor, Chris specializes in providing clients in both the public and private sectors with strategic advice on coordinating and addressing the various levels of approvals required for complex projects.

He advises clients on a broad range of matters, including municipal governance, heritage, growth management, cultural heritage, parkland dedication/valuations, employment land, and aggregate resource policies. Chris also advises landowners and authorities on expropriations under both federal and provincial statutes.

His clients include large landowner groups, governments and individual clients whom he advises on development charges and cost-sharing matters, environmental assessment processes and approvals, and the implications of provincial policies and initiatives.

Chris appears regularly before the Ontario Land Tribunal (OLT) and municipal councils. He advises clients on potential remedies in the courts, representing both the private sector and municipalities in bringing and responding to applications for judicial review of municipal and government decisions. He also acts as appellate counsel on appeals or reviews of OLT decisions.

Chris has been recognized in the Lexpert/ALM 500 Leading 500 Lawyers in Canada in the area of Property Development. He is a regular speaker at continuing legal education events, and has provided annual case law updates to the Ontario Bar Association for more than 15 years. Chris also teaches Planning Law at the Toronto Metropolitan University School of Urban and Regional Planning.
